a deadly thing that saps the moral and physical powers of young men. Most of you know what these are," said he, holding up a hand of cards. "Although I do not think it advisable to play cards, I will not denounce the amusement. As an amuse ment card playing is by many thought to be a harmless pastime. It is the love of the excitement that makes card playing fascinating, and the excitement is the greater when there is something at stake. It is then that gambling begins. Dr. Mc-Gaw related his experience at card playing when a student at college, to see his room mate engaged in a suit will be." card game. He told how his pastor took him out for a walk, and made things lively for him for awhile, and says Sam Kendall, of Phillipsburg, of cards since that day.
